

Brett A. Killeen, Principal
Torrey Pines High School

I'm very proud to welcome you to one of the best high schools in the United States—Torrey Pines High School. We are fortunate and thankful to be a part of a wonderfully supportive community—a community that values education, service to our world, and activities that help students develop in a well-rounded, diverse fashion. Our students and staff are well-known for their amazing achievements, but what most impresses me is their character and their desire to contribute to our world in meaningful and sincere ways.

This is my sixth year serving as Principal at TPHS, and it's nice to convey that I have the same passion about education and empowering students' lives through learning as I did as a new teacher nineteen years ago. Prior to serving as principal here, I was a high school principal and vice principal in another district, and preceding that experience, I taught English at both the high school and middle school levels. My experience across diverse demographics has enriched my educational experiences, but one thing is constant—people matter. Don't ever be afraid to reach out and say, "Hello" or ask me anything. As a father of three children, I try to foster an environment here at TPHS the same way I would for my own children.

Our work this coming year is focused and in alignment with our Single Plan for Student Achievement (SPSA). The SPSA is the blueprint for action and it was developed by teachers, classified staff, parents, students, and administration. You may access the full document on this website, but we have embraced four goals by which we commit to:

- Increase our schoolwide and subgroup student achievement by aligning learning objectives and activities with the standards.
- Increase Honors/Advanced Placement student achievement via enrichment and differentiated opportunities.
- Develop and implement a clear, consistent, and systematic intervention plan to support at-risk, struggling students and/or English Learners.
- Create and ensure a safe and respectful learning environment that supports, connects, and motivates all students and staff.

Thank you for choosing TPHS—Get connected, engaged, and excited. We're here for you and we welcome you as a Torrey Pines High School Falcon! Together, let's have a terrific 2011/2012 school year.

Sincerely,

Brett A. Killeen
