How to Insulate our Students from a Tough Budget Climate

By Brett Killeen, Principal

The economic reality is that times are tough—at every level, from the federal government to the state of California, to San Diego, right on down to our District and school. No longer can our community merely step up in a private way and off-set some of the economic uncertainty, because we are all feeling it. While we wrestle with the facts and their implications, what is most important to me as a principal and as a dad is, "How can we responsibly deal with the budget crisis, yet protect our students and the quality of their education at the same time?"

Let me begin by sharing what I do know about the budget implications for our district, and then address how we can help our students a little later. Our funding and budget planning is dependent on three issues, two of which are partially resolved right now. The three issues include the following:

- The Federal Stimulus Bill ("American Recovery and Reinvestment Act")
- The Approved State Budget
- Whether we will continue to be funded as a "Base Revenue Limit" District or as a "Basic Aid" District

As you know, the Federal Stimulus Bill was signed by President Obama, and now local districts are trying to figure out to what extent that legislation will impact us at the school level. Most money from the federal government for schools is directed to help the most needy districts, such as those that have high populations of students who are labeled, SES (Low Socio-Economic Status), and/or high populations of traditionally under-represented subgroups and "At-Risk" populations, such as English Learners and Special Education. Districts who do have large demographic populations like this are often labeled, "Title I" Districts. The truth is, our demographics do not reflect those districts that traditionally receive federal monies, and therefore, we do not foresee much relief from the Federal Stimulus Bill.

After much political "drama" at the state level, we do have an approved state budget for the next 18 months. However, key components of the budget (initiatives) are subject to a special election on May 19th. If the initiatives that relate to education funding do not pass in the special election, our legislature will have to go back to the table to figure out what to do. Assuming it remains intact, here's what it means for our district:

- We are experiencing "mid-year" cuts. We are absorbing these cuts by freezing our budgets. We did not have to lay any employees off mid-year.
- Several of our classified, non-teaching positions have been eliminated or trimmed for next year.
- No probationary or tenured teacher lay-offs are planned for next year. However, teachers on temporary, one-year contracts, may not be renewed.
- Last year, we absorbed a 19 section cut to our master schedule, and that will remain for this coming school year. The net effect of this is a slight bump in class size across the school and district.
- The District must plan to absorb a $7.5 million dollar cut when you compare where we were supposed to have been funded at the outset of this year and what the state plans to fund us for the 2009/2010 school year.
- We may get some flexibility on how the district can spend categorical money, and that may be helpful to meet our bottom line. Categorical money is state and/or federal money that is allocated for specific programs. We do not plan on cutting programs, but the flexibility permits us to be more creative to meet prioritized needs.

The third and final factor in how we fund our schools in this district relates to whether we will remain as a "Base Revenue Limit" funded District or if we will transition to become a "Basic Aid" funded District. As a "Base Revenue Limit" District, the majority of our funding comes from our local property taxes, and to reach the "limit," the state "tops us off" to meet the base revenue limit. The base revenue limit for our District is currently $6,640 per student. If our property taxes yield more than $6,640, then we become "Basic Aid." In that scenario, anything we collect beyond the limit is ours to keep. If the state moves the base revenue limit down, we may be forced into basic aid. The bottom line is even if we become basic aid, it does not mean that we are all of a sudden a "wealthy" district. Regardless of our status, we will continue to have to deal with cuts for several years. We will not know about our funding status until approximately May.

Hopefully, you now have some updated information about how we are funded and what the implications are for our school and district. As "gloomy" as this information is, it is important to protect our kids insofar as we remain positive, understand that these challenges are cyclical, and keep the cuts as far away from the classroom as possible. If a family, for example, were having financial challenges, the parents certainly would be concerned and speak frankly with one another about how best to handle the situation, but they would then turn to the kids and say, "We're going to get through this together; this is for us to figure out and not for you to stress about." That's the kind of attitude we're adopting as educators. We will protect our kids and continue to focus on the quality education they are getting every day in the classroom. I encourage students to talk to me if they are worried, because we would want to alleviate their concerns. As always, we appreciate your support, as parents, as we partner to support our amazing kids. Thanks again, and if you have questions, comments, or concerns, let me know!

For the tenth year in a row, Torrey Pines High School took first place at the San Diego Regional Science Olympiad. Torrey Pines now qualifies to advance to the state competition in Long Beach on April 18. Eighty-eight amazing Torrey Pines students competed in the regional competition which was held on February 7 at Rancho Bernardo High School. This was the largest Regional Science Olympiad competition of any county in the United States. A total of 57 teams from 19 high schools from San Diego County participated. This was the 14th year that Torrey Pines has participated. The teams are organized and coached by the dedicated parent volunteers.

Science Olympiad competitions encourage team work and learning across a slate of events that are developed according to the national science education standards and other guidelines that are established by the National Science Olympiad Board and State Committees. Science Olympiad events are balanced among three broad areas of the Science Standards: 1) Science Concepts and Science Knowledge, 2) Science Processes and Inquiry Skills, and 3) Science Application and Technology. The events include the following content areas: life science, earth/space, physical/chemistry, inquiry/nature, and technology.

Students built robots, rockets, bridges, catapults, time pieces and electric vehicles. All were tested the day of competition. Students were tested in a variety of subjects including astronomy, herpetology, remote sensing, ecology, fossils, and major science content areas. They used thinking skills and demonstrated applications in biology, chemistry, physics, experimental design, health concepts, forensics, disease, earthquakes, technical writing and problem solving, and scientific terms.

Additionally, the firm allowed students to meet regularly in their conference room for training. The Law Club Mock Trial Competition Team competed for the first time in the San Diego County Constitutional Rights Foundation Mock Trial Competition in February. The Law Club meets every Wednesday during lunch in Mrs. Jackie Niddrie's room (12).
